Cadix, Jan. 4.

We impatiently expect the Arrival of the Galleons, which arrived at the Havana the 21st of October. The King is certainly expected at this Place, after he has seen the Exchange of the Infantas made on the Frontiers. On Saturday last the Duke of Richmond, a very agreeable English Nobleman, arrived here from Madrid; and Tomorrow he sets out by Land for Gibraltar, having a Licence from the King to pass through the Camp, which is esteem'd an exceeding great Favour. A considerable Number of Brass Cannon, Mortars, &c. have been sent toward the Coast on the Bay of Gibraltar, as 'tis said, for the greater Convenience of shipping them thence for Ceuta.

The Good Alliance, Capt. Erick Brink, (the Swedish Ship of 54 Guns which arrived here the 21st ult.) is sold to the King. The 3 Ships purchased from the Genoese, are now in the Bay, being not yet delivered.

London, Jan. 30. Extract of a Letter from Northampton, dated January 25. On Wednesday last a neighbouring Farmer having sold at the Market here a Waggon Load of Corn, and taken the Money for it, and there having been frequent Robberies lately committed hereabout by Foot Pads, his Landlord at the Inn advised him to ty his Money up in the empty Sacks, and send it home in the Waggon for safety; which he did. His Man had not driven the Waggon about two Miles, till it was stopp'd by a Foot-Pad, who knocked the Fellow down, and then went and searched the Sacks for the Money; mean while, the Farmer's Man recovered, and having a Hammer by his Waggon Side, takes it and gets into the Waggon, and knocks the Rogue down and stunn'd him that he could make no Resistance, and then crammed him into one of the Sacks, and drove him home, tied fast in it. The Farmer came home soon after, and finding his Waggon had been driven very hard, by his Horses being hot, began to chide his Man, who desired his Master to keep his Temper, so he had brought him a present; then gets up into the Waggon, and pulls out the Rogue out of the Sick, who to their great Surprise, proved to be his Honest Landlord, that had advised him to put his Money there.

On Tuesday in the Afternoon, as several Persons were receiving Money in the Shop of Mr. Jenkins a Banker, at the King's Head in Lombard Street, a Fellow slipt into the back Shop, and crept up a Chimney, where he remained till about seven in the Evening; but making some Noise, alarmed the Servants of the House, as also those in the Shop, who were telling up their Cash; and they leaving their Bags behind the Compter, ran up Stairs to affist. In the mean time, the Fellow came out of the Chimney, took two Bags, in which were 200 Moidores, several odd Gold Pieces, about 30 L. value, and about 20 L. in Silver; but left a Bag wherein was 1000 L. he afterwards opened the Door and got clear off.

Wye's Letter verbatim, London, Feb. 1.
Since our last arrived a Holland Mail.

WE cannot yet learn the Contents of the Dispatches mentioned in our last, to be arrived from France. Mean time, if you will credit what is wrote from Vienna, which came by the Holland Mail Yesterday, the Court of Madrid has declared, that they will not consent to any Accommodation till their Pretensions to Gibraltar and Port Mahon be decided in the Congress: But 'tis strange such a Declaration should be made, after his Catholick Majesty had signed the Preliminary Articles; by the second of which we obtained, as the Author of the Observations on the Conduct of Great Britain asserts, the plainest and most direct Acknowledgments and Confirmation of our just Rights and Possessions. On the other Hand, the above Letter adds, That the Court of Madrid pretends promises were then made at the Time of signing the Preliminaries, that their Pretensions to the said Fortresses should be determined in the Congress; which is so absurd as not to be credited.

Last Night it was resolved, That the Number of effective Men for the Service of the Year 1729, be 22953; Commission and Non-commissioned Officers included. The Arguments that were urged for the Continuance of that Number, were the inty of the Affairs abroad ; and that if we were not to a speedy Conclusion, as to the ~~Measures~~ Measures, they might see how we are determined to support the Honour of King and Country, by granting him such Supplies as were necessary to carry on a War ; which, as they had ~~opes~~ given them of the Divisions and Dissentions, particularly in the Parliament, would be a means of bringing them to a more speedy Compliance, when they found us in earnest. It was urged, That the Provisional Treaty had been sent to the Courts of Vienna and Madrid above three Months since for their Approbation, and that no Answer had yet been returned, whether they would, or would not comply therewith ; and that the Reason of which was, they waited to know the Resolutions the House should come to.

The Arguments against it, we hear, were, That this was not a Military Constitution ; That Soldiers were a great Burden to a free People ; and that, if Affairs should oblige us to a Necessity of a War with Spain, it would be a Maritime one ; and therefore they conceived there was no Necessity of containing so great a Number of Land-Forces.

Mr. Pultney, among other things, flung out several Insinuations, as tho' the Government had been guilty of several Mismanagements. Which was fully answered by Mr. Horace Walpole, who informed the House of the whole Transactions abroad, to their entire Satisfaction. And Sir Robert Walpole said, That the Cause of the Delay of bringing the Congress to a Conclusion, was owing to the Hopes there had been given of our Divisions and Divisions ; which he could prove both by Letters and living Witnesses. And others remarked, that Affairs were so, as that they could not permit a Reduction ; and added, That it would be an ill Example, for us to reduce our Troops, when our Allies kept theirs up for fear of a Rupture.

The Parliament did not sit this Day.

The Rev. Mr. Drayton is presented to the Rectory of Crundall in Kent, vacant by the Death of the last Incumbent, who left his Library and 10 L. a Year in Land, to his Successors for ever.

Very great Intercession is making with his Majesty in behalf of Robert Hales, Esq;
